Qualities of a Sociopath

'Someone who is described as a sociopath will have several traits that set them apart from those with no personality disorders. These traits include:

* Lack of empathy - Inability to feel sympathy for others or to understand the emotional consequences of their actions. * Cold, calculating nature - The ability and willingness to use others around them for personal gain.

* Shallow emotions - Lack of real emotion in response to events, limited capacity to feel love. * Narcissism - A personality disorder in itself, in which the individual feels strong love and admiration toward themselves (often a defense mechanism against deep seated low esteem).

* Grandiose self-image - They might see themselves as someone who is superior to others and sometimes even experiences delusions.

A sociopath might see themselves as a fitting ruler of a country or even the world, but might also have delusional beliefs such as seeing themselves as a God or having super powers.

* Charming - While the sociopath is unable to fully understand the emotions of others, they are capable and rather highly adept at mimicking them and might appear to be charming and normal at first.

* High IQ - Often sociopaths will exhibit a high IQ which they can use to manipulate and plan. * Manipulative - Sociopaths use their superficial charm and high IQ to manipulate others to get their ends, and their lack of empathy allows them to do this with no sense of guilt or remorse.

* Secretive - Has little need for others and is highly secretive in their actions. * Sexually deviant - The lack of remorse, guilt or emotional attachments means that the sociopath is happy to have affairs and to engage in questionable sexual activity without questioning their desires.

* Sensitive to criticism - That said, like all narcissists, the sociopath will desire the approval of others, will be highly sensitive to criticisms. They often feel they deserve adulation and admiration of the world and might feel victimized.

* Paranoid - Often their lack of understanding of emotion along with their incongruous self-view means that they feel a lack of trust and paranoia. * Despotic/Authoritarian - Often the sociopath will see themselves as a necessary authority and will be in favor of totalitarian rule. * Lawfulness - Despite popular belief, a sociopath is not likely to be a problem to the law in later life, but rather will seek to find loopholes, to rise to a position of power, or to move to another area so that their behavior is tolerated

* Low tolerance for boredom - Sociopaths require constant stimulation and get quickly bored. * Impulsive behavior - A lack of regret and empathy makes sociopaths more likely to make sudden rash decisions based on the current facts.

* Compulsive lying - As part of their façade and as a means to an end, sociopaths are compulsive liars and will rarely speak truthfully, making them hard to pin down.

Sociopaths of course vary in their symptoms and might act differently in different cases. However, their main trait is presenting themselves as having the same empathy, feelings and emotions as others when in fact they lack this emotional capacity. They are thus cold and manipulative and rarely see any problem with their actions. (see egosyntonic)

Profile of a Sociopath

A sociopath is likely to have been a 'problem child' and exhibited difficult behaviour when younger. As they grow older they are likely to be highly successful which is a result of their willingness to get one over on their competition and colleagues, a desire and belief in success, and lack of risk aversion. Alternatively, a sociopath might be likely to live on the fringes of society having little interest in people. They could be eccentric and will most likely be independently wealthy. In other words, they will either conquer the system or avoid it entirely. They will of course have few close friends and are more likely to make contacts with those they can use, or those they see as equals and that they can admire. They will tend to be cold and manipulative in relationships and potentially emotionally abusive, though this might not necessarily be purposefully vindictive. In all cases though the psychopath will appear highly intelligent, charming and charismatic to talk to and it is only careful guardedness that can uncover their true motivations.
